

Abby Rodewald is a Landscape Architect with Genus Landscape Architects in Des Moines. Abby attributes her love for creating outdoor spaces to the countless number of hours she spent with nature growing up in rural Wisconsin. She holds a Bachelor's Degree in Landscape Architecture from Iowa State University. As a student she participated in a study abroad program in Rome and was a student intern for the National Park Service in the Grand Teton National Park. She enjoys working on a variety of projects, from large to small, and likes collaborating and building relationships with clients.

Abby currently serves as President Elect of the Young Professionals Connection, an organization that strives to attract and retain young professionals to Des Moines. Her involvement with the group began 4 years ago when she first relocated to the area.

In her spare time, Abby loves taking on home renovation projects, riding her bike, and taking her dog, Emma, to the park.
